data. The declarative nature of LogiQL is the key reason for its suitability for rapid application development.

LogiQL is a logic programming language, where computations over data are expressed in terms of logical relations among sets of data: e.g., conjunctions, implications, etc. Internally, relational data are organized as a key-value store.

Red Fox: An Execution Environment for Relational Query

We give an overview of LogiQL, a declarative, Datalog based language for data management and analytics, along with techniques for efficient evaluation of LogiQL programs, emphasizing theoretical foundations when possible.
